

INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE ON THE HISTORY OF THE WORLD

CONFERENCE: The International Conference on the History of the World was held in Beijing, China, from 1993 to 1997. It was the first time that a world conference of this kind had been held. The conference was organized by the Chinese government and the International History Commission of the International Council for the History of World Civilizations. The conference was held in four sessions: the first in Beijing (1993), the second in Beijing (1994), the third in Beijing (1995), and the fourth in Beijing (1997). The conference was a success and it was a landmark event in the history of world civilization.

The conference was held in Beijing, China, from 1993 to 1997. It was the first time that a world conference of this kind had been held. The conference was organized by the Chinese government and the International History Commission of the International Council for the History of World Civilizations. The conference was held in four sessions: the first in Beijing (1993), the second in Beijing (1994), the third in Beijing (1995), and the fourth in Beijing (1997). The conference was a success and it was a landmark event in the history of world civilization.

The conference was held in Beijing, China, from 1993 to 1997. It was the first time that a world conference of this kind had been held. The conference was organized by the Chinese government and the International History Commission of the International Council for the History of World Civilizations. The conference was held in four sessions: the first in Beijing (1993), the second in Beijing (1994), the third in Beijing (1995), and the fourth in Beijing (1997). The conference was a success and it was a landmark event in the history of world civilization.

The conference was held in Beijing, China, from 1993 to 1997. It was the first time that a world conference of this kind had been held. The conference was organized by the Chinese government and the International History Commission of the International Council for the History of World Civilizations. The conference was held in four sessions: the first in Beijing (1993), the second in Beijing (1994), the third in Beijing (1995), and the fourth in Beijing (1997). The conference was a success and it was a landmark event in the history of world civilization.

The conference was held in Beijing, China, from 1993 to 1997. It was the first time that a world conference of this kind had been held. The conference was organized by the Chinese government and the International History Commission of the International Council for the History of World Civilizations. The conference was held in four sessions: the first in Beijing (1993), the second in Beijing (1994), the third in Beijing (1995), and the fourth in Beijing (1997). The conference was a success and it was a landmark event in the history of world civilization.

The conference was held in Beijing, China, from 1993 to 1997. It was the first time that a world conference of this kind had been held. The conference was organized by the Chinese government and the International History Commission of the International Council for the History of World Civilizations. The conference was held in four sessions: the first in Beijing (1993), the second in Beijing (1994), the third in Beijing (1995), and the fourth in Beijing (1997). The conference was a success and it was a landmark event in the history of world civilization.

The conference was held in Beijing, China, from 1993 to 1997. It was the first time that a world conference of this kind had been held. The conference was organized by the Chinese government and the International History Commission of the International Council for the History of World Civilizations. The conference was held in four sessions: the first in Beijing (1993), the second in Beijing (1994), the third in Beijing (1995), and the fourth in Beijing (1997). The conference was a success and it was a landmark event in the history of world civilization.

