

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA SCHOOL OF JOURNALISM AND MASS COMMUNICATION COMMUNICATIONS CENTER

The University of California, School of Journalism and Mass Communication, Communications Center is pleased to announce the launch of the new Center for the Study of the Media.

The Center for the Study of the Media is a new interdisciplinary center that will focus on the study of the media and its impact on society. The center will be housed in the Communications Center building.

The center will be led by Professor [Name], who is currently serving as the interim director. The center will have a staff of approximately 100 people.

The center will be a major part of the University's commitment to research and scholarship. The center will provide a unique environment for the study of the media and its impact on society. The center will also provide a forum for the dissemination of research findings.

The center will be a major part of the University's commitment to research and scholarship. The center will provide a unique environment for the study of the media and its impact on society. The center will also provide a forum for the dissemination of research findings.